Profile

I am Dr. Nizar Al-Shar'i a pharmacist with a PhD degree in Medicinal Chemistry and Computer-Aided Drug Design. Currently I'm an associate professor in Medicinal Chemistry and Drug Design in the Department of Medicinal Chemistry and Pharmacognosy at the Faculty of Pharmacy, Jordan University of Science and Technology (JUST), Irbid, Jordan. I earned a BS Pharm degree in 2001 and an MPharm degree in medicinal Chemistry in 2007 from the Faculty of Pharmacy, JUST. In 2013, I graduated from Strathclyde Institute of Pharmacy and Biomedical Sciences (SIPBS), University of Strathclyde, Glasgow, UK, with a PhD degree in Medicinal Chemistry and Computer-Aided Drug Design, and then I joined the Faculty of Pharmacy at JUST as a full time lecturer. In April 2013, I was promoted to assistant professor, and then to associate professor in June 2018.

During that time, I was appointed to many administrative positions. I started as an assistant dean for postgraduate and quality assurance affairs, then as a chairperson for the department of medicinal chemistry and pharmacognosy, and finally as a vice dean for accreditation and quality assurance where I was in charge of the ACPE accreditation file. Meanwhile, I also chaired many institutional committees such as assessment committee, accreditation and quality assurance committee, and participated in many committees such as strategic planning, scientific research, postgraduate studies, to name a few.

In terms of research, I'm interested in drug discovery via applying Computer-Aided Drug Design (CADD) methods, and Molecular Dynamics (MD) Simulation. I also published many articles in peer-reviewed international indexed journals. The core of my research work stems from my belief that the combination of experimental and theoretical approaches provides an invaluable and unique insight into the systems being studied.

Regarding my teaching philosophy, it originates from both personal and professional experiences in the classroom and out. During my graduate and postgraduate studies, I encountered many professors in different disciplines with different attitudes and teaching approaches. From that journey, I concluded that it is more important to teach than to instruct, being passionate for teaching, and more importantly, being humble. I believe, my responsibility as a teacher is to create an environment that allows for supervised exploration of the area of knowledge that students will encounter in that course. Moreover, in this environment students should be empowered to think critically and creatively, get engaged, and receive constructive feedback with "respect and dignity". These elements, I believe, massively affects the success of the educational encounter. Moreover, it is important to understand that students have different learning abilities; therefore, one must start by evaluating the needs of the students and tailoring the teaching approach to them and use variable teaching and assessment methods to ensure proper delivery of the taught material. This in turn requires continuous refinement of the teaching process and the utilization of any additional tools necessary for students to learn. Therefore, without reflecting at what we have done, we are not informed about what we might do. This active and reflective style of teaching is a cornerstone to me, that is why in my classes I ask a lot of questions to my students; probe what they know, and what they think and why, in order to help them discover their own ability to solve problems and push them to explore their potential. The two most important question I always urge my students to ask, and think about, are the WHY and HOW. That is why I prefer the problem-based way of teaching, whenever possible, because it provokes critical and analytical thinking for the students; and in this engaging and interactive learning way, I equip them with a TOOL BOX that helps them be lifelong learners. I totally agree with the saying: "Tell me and I'll forget. Show me, and I may not remember. Involve me, and I'll understand." I guess for all of us, there was one great professor who truly changed our way of learning and thinking, I would like to spend my career being that great professor to my students.

"By learning you will teach; by teaching you will learn", an old Latin proverb.
